PREFACE

Peace, war, and peace again have visited our campus during the last four years. Sport clothes and collegiate affairs were replaced by uniforms and war. Where boys left, wise men have returned to find that the buildings on the campus overlook the same walks and the same trees. Their concreteness has had no mark of war-time scratched on their surfaces. Still from the auditorium comes the singing of the choir for vespers. The bell is still heard—urging students to and from campus affairs. As individuals we function, with responsibilities to our country through ourselves, as free people, not as slaves by blind and inflexible dogmas.

Let us not forget that this freedom is created throughout sunlit streets of America, in our children's play, in the sound of church bells, and in the right to stand up in assembly and say the truth as we know it—So let us remember all this, and hope that some day people all over the world will also know the meaning of this word freedom.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS OF EDUCATIONAL SERVICE

FROM THE PAGES OF HISTORY

By JOSEPH H. TAYLOR, Ph.D.

Chairman Social Science Division, N. C. College

When the Editors of the MAROON AND GRAY requested that I write a short historical sketch of the college for the 1946 edition, I suggested that the students and faculty might be interested in some account of the early activities of the school.

As a result of two disastrous fires in 1925 valuable records of the school were destroyed. However, through the painstaking efforts of Miss Papepa Watson, the Librarian, there has been placed at my disposal the earliest available bulletin of the National Religious Training School. This bulletin was issued in July, 1912, two years after the founding of the school. It therefore, is the chief source for the short story which follows.

The National Religious Training School, which in later years was to become the North Carolina College for Negroes, was founded by Dr. James E. Shepard. The school began operation in July, 1910, with 130 students. The first regular term, the following October, began with an enrollment of 109 students.

The first building was started in April, 1910, and by January, 1912, ten buildings had been erected on twenty-five acres of land one-half mile from the corporate limits of the city of Durham. This site (the present location) was a gift largely of the white people of the city. One of the original buildings—Avery Auditorium—still stands on the campus.

Within the short span of two years the grounds had been put into excellent condition; walks and roadways laid out; garden plots and terraces made; and a water system installed. The monetary valuation of the plant had grown from nothing on January 1, 1910 to over $100,000 two years later.

There is listed in the 1912 bulletin a staff of twenty-one persons. There was one teacher each of English, History, Mathematics, Science, Music, Latin and Greek, Millinery, Domestic Science, Domestic Art, and Carpentry. Dean John Henry Moore and one assistant were in charge of classes in Religious Training and Bible. There were two teachers of commercial subjects. The Teacher Training Department had one superintendent and an assistant. The teacher of English was also in charge of physical training. There was a Registrar; a Business Director; a Matron. A leading physician of Durham taught classes in Physiology and Hygiene.

Among the activities listed for the year 1912-1913 were a missionary concert, a temperance concert, and public meetings under the sponsorship of the Y. M. C. A. and the Theological Fraternity.

Old President's Home, on site now occupied by the College Library.

Students of the present generation will be particularly interested in learning that the Christmas holiday for 1912 was December 25. The students of 1912-1913 celebrated Emancipation Day on January 1 by being excused from classes.

Board and room cost $7.00 per month; tuition, $1.00 per month; boys' washing, seventy-five cents per month. Considerable saving could be accomplished if the student paid by the term. For the fall term, from the opening to Christmas, the cost was placed at $25.00. For the spring term, from Christmas to the close of school, the cost to the student was $37.00. $25.00 would pay the expenses of a country minister for a six weeks' summer session; $90.00, the tuition and board of a student for one whole term; $500 to $1,000, the salary of a teacher or professor for one year; while $10,000 would erect and equip a building.

The 1912 bulletin devotes considerable space to the commencement activities of that year. Then, as now, the commencement speakers were of high calibre and attainment. The joint literary societies were addressed by William H. Lewis, noted Negro lawyer of Boston, and assistant attorney-general of the United States. The regular commencement orator was the venerable Charles H. Parkhurst, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, of New York City.

Following Dr. Parkhurst's address diplomas were awarded to 8 students—5 women and 3 men—from the Commercial Department. Certificates were also awarded in Penmanship, Sewing, and Millinery.

The Durham Daily Sun, of May 23, 1912, had the following story about the commencement activities:

With the band playing enlivening airs, the female students attired in modest white dresses, with the male students carrying themselves in true military style, the campus of the National Religious Training School yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock was an inspiring scene. The occasion was the first class day and tree planting in the history of the young institution. Visitors from the various sections of the state and several other states were present and at the conclusion of the program visited the various departments having

This is Avery Auditorium at N. C. College

From this building the people of North Carolina have built a state institution, the only Negro state supported Liberal Arts College in this country.

Around this building have been built many buildings, classrooms, laboratories, gymnasiums, dormitories, and a library.

And many men and women have come to the buildings to spend their lives in a great work.

Many have passed this symbol of the past and creation of the new, bent upon learning the way to a fuller life of usefulness.

The building is old—The College is ageless, neither young nor old. For the people of North Carolina have willed that it shall be dedicated to the greatest of creative achievement—education of youth.

The New

This is B. N. Duke Auditorium, center of community and college cultural and religious life.

The foundation for research and personal development—The Library.

The College Dining Hall.

Campus

That her students may study into the great field of science—the College Science building is a meeting place for theory and practice in scientific achievement.

The Senior Bowl—where common bonds between generations of students are held sacred.

That her students may enjoy a homelike atmosphere, beautiful dormitories for men and women are maintained.

Realizing the future problems of the home, The Practice Cottage gives to students actual experience in home management and development.

ACADEMIC FIELDS

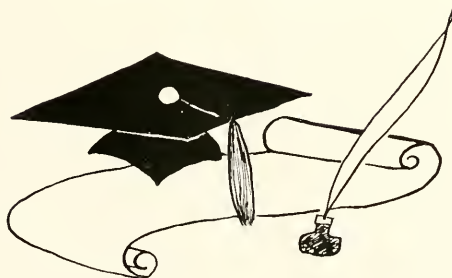

To give her students a broad preparation for good citizenship, the college offers courses leading to B. S. and A. B. Degrees in Liberal Arts courses.

Here the student may delve into the social sciences and allied groups—history, political science, economics, philosophy, and psychology; sociology, home economics, education, commerce and public health. He may learn the tongues of other lands—French, German, Latin and Spanish. English becomes a major part of his training. The Fine Arts—music, dramatic art, and art—are taught. The pure sciences—botany, chemistry, mathematics, biology, and zoology are studied from the standpoint of theory augmented by practical laboratory experience.

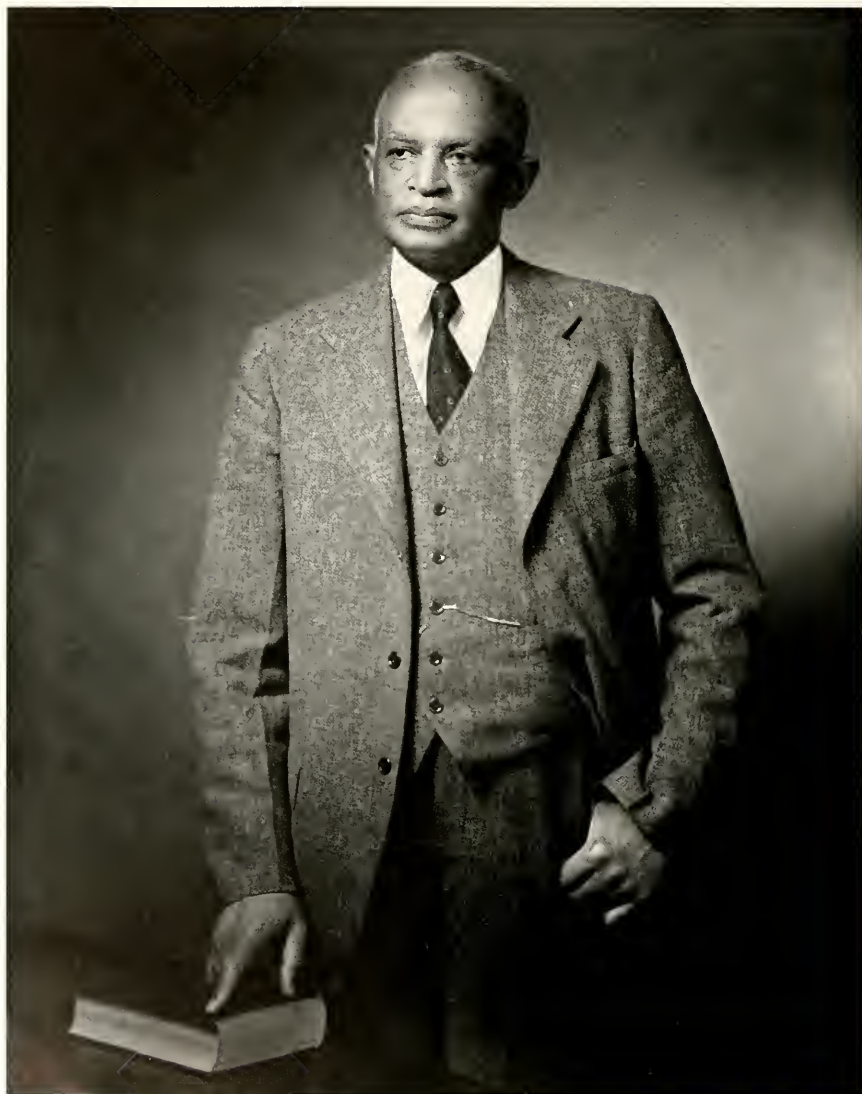

More than theory is imparted at N. C. College. It is a union of culture on one hand, and a broad general education on the other.

From the undergraduate school, the road branches into the professional schools: law, public health, education, commerce, science, or perhaps into the school of Library Science for special training.

You are what the world needs, SENIORS!

The Senior Class of 1946. Proudly we say this phrase; and equally proud are we of your four years at State. In these years you saw many changes in classmates, on the campus, and in the nation. As freshmen, you heard war declared and saw our men leave for the service. And in the four years of war and sorrows, we saw your smile and behind those smiles courage; for hardly a one of you was not affected directly by the war—and many of you had relatives overseas.

Now the world calls you as adults, and we look back on your four college years with gratitude of what State did for you. We hope that your stay on the campus was to live up to the highest of State traditions, its understanding, the development of priceless friendships, and the development within you of character, ideals and dreams.

We regret that you leave us, but we are anxious for you to put to use the knowledge gained. And though you be scattered across the country, we look forward to your hasty return.

Almost a big frog in the State puddle—you JUNIORS

As Juniors you returned this year depleted in number but determined to carry on in the spirit of the class of 1947. We missed many of you, but enjoyed meeting others who did return to State this fall, and we welcomed those of you who transferred into our ranks from other schools. And we miss those boys who have left for the Service or who graduated ahead of you, as a result of summer study.

As Juniors you are an in-between-class, you are not yet the top class on the campus, and neither are you new. We look forward to the time when you will become campus leaders. Already you are going through a training period.

As a class you should have solidarity that comes from your thinned ranks and your months of living together.

Now, as you begin to realize that the last year of your college life is approaching, you should endeavor to make the greatest possible contribution to the college, to the community, and to yourselves.

You know your way around now! Sophomores

You have come back to "Dear Old N. C. C.," but this time as sophomores, ever conscious of the new responsibilities which you must assume.

Your work began with the arrival of freshmen in September. Those of you who carried bags and trunks last year, became guides for tours of the campus, gave advice to freshmen, and assisted in cheering the homesick freshmen.

You started the year with a wonderful feeling because you were sophomores and no longer the "babes in arms" of dear old State. You could now show the freshmen how to behave as you had been so painfully shown the year before. You feel that you know the "ins" and "outs" of college life, and you were ready and willing to let everyone know it.

So new, but soon so wise—Freshmen

The Freshman Class of 1946 entered State with high aspirations of achievement and success. You, as a class felt that you possessed the potential qualities necessary to carry you through the four years of your college career. During Freshman Week, you received from your advisors, the faculty, and the staff, invaluable aid which helped you to become better adjusted to the new phase of your life. With their assistance you easily leaped the hurdles of registration and placement tests.

The next weeks were filled with studying and quizzes in preparation for the first quarter examinations. After these tests were completed, Christmas and vacation loomed foremost in your minds, and in almost no time you boarded the train for home and holiday fun.

As a Class, to be graduated in 1949, you must uphold and strengthen the aims of North Carolina College and during the next three years you must make the most of your college careers.

College is a grand place anytime, but when it's State with a Freshman Class like yours, the outlook for 1949 is very consoling.

The College— Its Student Organizations

Organizations have always been a stimulus for achievement. To us as individuals, they offer an opportunity for self-improvement and advancement. More important than that, these organizations offer us chances to form lasting friendships with the people with whom we work. They give us confidence in our work—confidence that helps us push ahead with new ideas and improved talents. The importance of these organizations can never be underestimated in its benefits to the individual or to society. It is through organizations that individuals can bring out new plans and ideas for the progress of civilization.

Very few of us can achieve success alone. The older we become, the more we realize the truth of this statement and recognize the importance of having an organization to act as a goal and later to act as a helping hand to our future activities. It is the right of every individual to be able to join an organization to which he can give his ideas and from which he can gain incentive for further achievement. We get out of them what we put into them; and from them we can obtain much in the way of friendships, confidence in ourselves and our accomplishments, and inspiration for our present and future work.

The PEM Club is a relatively new organization on the Campus. This association composed of Physical Education Majors and Minors was organized in the fall of 1945. Its function is to develop the individual socially, morally, and physically, and by so doing interest others in the field of physical education.

The present membership enrollment is approximately 75 and with an ever increasing demand for physical educators, participation in this field is advisable.

With a splendid advisory committee composed of Coach J. B. McLendon, Coach L. T. Walker, Miss Q. A. Walton, and Mrs. W. T. Bailey, the PEM Club shows promising qualities for becoming one of, if not the most outstanding organization on the campus.

The W. A. A. is an organization of which one becomes a member by maintaining a "C" average. The governing body is a board of directors elected by popular ballot. By cooperating with W. A. A.'s all over the country we try to further a spirit of sportsmanship, interest in athletics and physical well-being among college women.

The association sponsors major, minor and individual sports, in addition such activities as dancing, swimming and hiking.

Awards are made on the basis of points which are earned by participation in the activities over a period of four years.

The W. A. A. is a member of Negro Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Association which is composed of Colleges having an intramural program for women. Each year the N. W. I. A. A. sponsors seasonal sport days at which times representatives from the college W. A. A.'s come together and participate in sports with awards given to the winning color team.

This has been a favorable year for the Women's Athletic Association, and as more young women become interested and the enrollment increases the prospects for a greater future organization are indeed very bright.

Athletics At North Carolina College

J. B. McLENDON

Head, Division of Physical Education

Basketball

North Carolina College began its basketball back in the 20's and with no gymnasium and few arrangements for practice and games, was able to do but little. With the College's entrance into the C.I.A.A. in 1927 added emphasis was placed on the sport but not until the gymnasium was built in 1935 did basketball become a popular sport.

In 1939, the Eagles with a freshman team, the tallest team in the country, broke into the first division of the Conference for the first time. In 1940 they advanced to the runner-up position in the Conference and in 1941 won the first Conference Championship in the school's history and National rating as No. 1 team. Then for every year since, the team has finished either 1st or 2nd in the Conference winning the runner-up position in '42, '45 and Championships in '43, '44, and '46 and the State College Championship six consecutive years. The National Collegiate Athletic Association has ranked the Eagles in the top twenty teams of the Nation for the past four years.

"The Eagles Fly High" is a well-known slogan and one which shows the achievement of the teams of the past 8 years for they have ranked first in offense, first in defense, and first in games won for those periods. Good sportsmanship is the password for all the Eagles and no team in the country takes the floor without the knowledge that a fighting North Carolina College Eagle Team will meet them in defense of their many laurels.

Football of N. C. College

The football teams of North Carolina College have made history; some of it as early as 1919, when one of its teams took part in what is considered as the 1st football game under lights for Negro Colleges.

North Carolina College on the heels of several very successful baseball seasons entered the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association in 1927, won its first conference football game in 1931 and finished in the first division for the first time also. Again in 1935 and 1939, 1940 and finishing in first place in 1941 placing several men on the All-Conference and All-American teams.

World War II reduced the number of players, made materials scarce and travel difficult, but the college took part in the 1st Annual Capital Classic in Washington, D. C. before 18,000 fans, placed one player on the All-American team and took pride in one who established the drop-kick record for the Conference.

No football in 1943 and 1944 made a come back in 1945 doubly difficult but a selected freshman coach with an all-freshman team put N. C. College in the 3rd place with only one conference loss. This team returned to the Capital Classic's 4th annual game.

The fine calibre of men who have directed the football teams, the fine calibre of the men themselves, their determination to excel has earned for the "Eagles" the name of "Good Sportsmen," and a reputation for hard, clean, competition and a command of respect from all teams everywhere.

Women's Intramural Athletic Program

Inspired by the Physical Education Majors, an active intramural program consisting of basketball, softball, archery, swimming, and many other sports headed the program for the year of '46!

The highlight of this program was the participation of each class in a basketball tournament which aroused keen competition and thrilling exhibitions of skills and techniques enjoyed by the student body.

The annual Sport's Day held in May was a colorful and competitive event. This program composed of major and minor sports, enabled every young woman to take an active part.

For the first time in the history of North Carolina College complete track and field events were offered. This project was conducted, planned, and executed by Senior Physical Education Majors. The superb condition and skill of the participants afforded strong competition and the spectators marveled at the techniques demonstrated so expertly and with such noble sportsmanship.

The College—Its Future

What is the future of such a college after 35 years of service? Will it help shape the future destiny of the State and Nation? Will it send forth men and women to become great educators, musicians, scientists, or artists?

That depends upon the students themselves. The College can provide the tools with which to build the world of the future—the rest depends on the student.

The tradition of achievement will rest partially upon the students. The future of the College and the future of its students go hand in hand.

What North Carolina College Offers . . .

GENERAL INFORMATION

The North Carolina College for Negroes is situated on a fifty-acre tract of land about two miles from the business district of Durham. About fifteen of these acres are used for the main campus. The remaining acres are in woodland with their natural scenery and beauty.

BUILDINGS

Administration Building. The Administration Building, erected in 1929, houses the Administrative offices, the post office and classrooms. There is also in this building an assembly room with a seating capacity of 200 and eight music practice rooms.

B. N. Duke Auditorium. Over nine hundred comfortable seats, splendid acoustics, and a handsomely curtained stage combine to make the Auditorium a fit setting for the different types of excellent programs which the College provides for its students and friends. Conspicuous among the appointments of this beautiful building are a concert grand piano and Hammond electric organ.

The Gymnasium for Young Women. A spacious gymnasium equipped with modern apparatus, showers and lockers, makes possible a well-rounded program of indoor athletics.

New Gymnasium and Swimming Pool. The new gymnasium will seat 2,200 people and the beautiful swimming pool is of regulation size.

The Practice Cottage for Senior Home Economics students is one of beauty and comfort. It is equipped with the conveniences which one will meet in any modern home. It is truly named "Practice Cottage," for here one learns "by doing" the things which have been taught for four years.

Residence Halls. Five modern dormitories, two for men and three for women, furnish comfortable living quarters for the boarding students. In the dormitories is every modern convenience, making available the comforts of the well-appointed home. Bath rooms with hot and cold water are located on each floor. Each room is provided with two single beds, a spacious study table, and other substantial and attractive furniture. Large living and recreation rooms add to the general comfort. Each room has floors of polished oak and two large closets. The furniture is modern and attractive.

The New Science Building has been erected and equipped at the cost of $185,000. The ground floor is devoted exclusively to Biology. The first floor is occupied by the Department of Home Economics with its show windows, model kitchens, nursery room, dining and reception rooms, and well-appointed sewing room.

The second floor is occupied by the Department of Physics. The equipment in this laboratory is modern and includes apparatus for elementary and advanced work.

The third floor is devoted to Chemistry. It is fitted with modern equipment for graduate and undergraduate work.

The College Refectory. The quality of the equipment of the large attractive refectory is in keeping with that of the other buildings. Steam tables, a special refrigeration plant and other modern appliances make possible the preparation of wholesome, palatable meals.

Art Room. In order to develop an appreciation for the beautiful, the Institution maintains an art room in which there are over $500 worth of the finest Medici Prints or the paintings of the great masters.

LIBRARY

The College Library contains 28,969 volumes, exclusive of unbound periodicals. The library of the Law School is an independent unit of over 12,430 volumes. The library of the School of Library Science is a special collection of 2,606 volumes. Approximately 300 current periodicals and 30 newspapers are received regularly.

STUDENT WELFARE

Social

The social program is planned so as to have each individual develop as an intelligent and cultured person. Social affairs are provided by the institution, by faculty members, and by groups of students.

Students' social affairs for any quarter must be registered in the Office of the Dean of Women within ten days after the beginning of the quarter. The individual or group registering for social affairs will be notified of the calendar after its approval.

Physical Education and Athletics

The institution employs a physical education director for men and two directors for women, thus affording every student a thorough course in physical training under expert supervision. The type of training for each student depends upon the student's needs and physical development.

Tennis courts are provided by the athletic association, which may be used by both male and female students.

Intercollegiate games in the major sports are engaged in with teams in the North Carolina Conference, the C.I.A.A., and other conferences. These games and activities are under the supervision of the athletic council, consisting of faculty, alumni, and student representatives.

The teams are trained by skilled coaches for values which come from exercise, bodily control, physical and mental alertness, and the principles of fair play.

LECTURES AND CONCERTS

The college seeks to increase the cultural advantages both of its students and faculty, and of the community. To this end distinguished scholars and men outstanding in public affairs, both State and National, are invited to deliver lectures and addresses. The college sponsors a concert season annually during which it presents outstanding vocalists, instrumental artists, and musical organizations.

—FROM THE PAGES OF HISTORY—

exhibits. The exhibits are above the average, and justly place the work of the school equal to that of the best Negro institutions of learning.

What was the original purpose of the National Religious Training School? The following facts are set forth in the bulletin under the heading, THE SCHOOL NEEDED:

To justify the existence of any new enterprise for the general welfare of mankind it is always necessary to demonstrate that there is a situation demanding the inauguration of such an effort. The following facts are sufficient to prove the need of the National Religious Training School:

1. There are 30,000 Negro ministers in the United States. Of this number accurate statistics show that only 10 per cent are trained, hence the appalling fact—27,000 untrained ministers largely controlling the destiny of 10,000,000 people. Negro ministers exert a most profound influence over the race. No educational scheme for the permanent uplift and betterment is worth while that does not take into consideration the active leaders of the race.

2. The permanent uplift of the race must come through moral and religious training. The charge that the young Negro is not as reliable as the old Negro is due to the fact that religion played the most important part in the life of the slave, and as a result, he could always be depended on and never betrayed the trust. He was always faithful. These qualities must again become racial assets, if we are to raise up a trustworthy citizenship.

3. The increase of crime can be traced to a lack of religious training. The moral law must be supreme. A man must be so taught that the law within will restrain him from cheating, stealing, killing and dishonesty.

4. There is no similar institution; it conflicts with none now established. It is non-sectarian and is open to all faiths and creeds.

That is, the first time we get a dependable tip that there is NEWS up there of special interest to our readers.

Wherever there is worthwhile news of peculiar interest to our readers, we'll send a man. Recently GUIDE reporters have been in Genoa, London, Monrovia, Belfast, Manila, Marseille, Tunis, San Francisco, Accra, Rome—all places where there was a BIG story with a NEGRO angle.

And that's why every week over 70,000 Negroes buy the GUIDE in addition to their daily papers . . . and read it column by column for the news that wasn't in the dailies.

Congratulations

We, of Christian-Harward Furniture Company, take great pleasure in extending to you, Dr. James E. Shepard and associates, our heartiest congratulations for the untiring work you have so faithfully performed in behalf of higher educational opportunities for your fellow man.

Through your determination and untiring efforts, the people of Durham and North Carolina have seen the North Carolina College for Negroes grow from naught to one of our largest and finest institutions of higher education.

Again we congratulate you and look forward to your continued success.

PLAN NOW . . . For A Successful Career

Have you ever asked yourself these questions: Ten, fifteen, twenty years from now—will I be traveling the road to success, or will my schooling mean little to me in the way of advancement?

Oft times a financial background is just as essential to success as a diploma. In planning your future, be sure to consider the importance of adequate financial backing. A life insured is a life secured. For you, it may mean the difference between success or failure.

MEN OF VISION

A great newspaper is more than a mechanical process. It is the brainchild of men with vision.

Fifty-four years ago, when John H. Murphy, Sr. founded the AFRO AMERICAN, he knew the importance of establishing a pattern which would insure a successful future.

Through the years, these principles have remained unaltered. John H. Murphy, Sr. knew that a newspaper is a servant of the people—a mirror reflecting the day by day history-making events in the lives of its readers.

Though times change, our editorial and business responsibilities to our readers will not. We will always remain faithful to the traditions of Journalism. We promise our million readers a newspaper worthy of the confidence of the entire family.

We shall strive to continue making job opportunities for the men and women graduating from our institutions for higher learning. Positions that are commensurate with the time, the money and the effort which make these graduations possible.
